15 million have had a near-death experience

The near-death experience (NDE) happens to millions of people. What's more these people do not think of themselves as having been near death but rather are actually convinced they were in death. Moreover, after their experience, these people do not believe in God but rather know such an ultimate reality does exist. This claim is backed up by the 46% of Americans who have experienced God's presence or a spiritual force many times in their lives. Another 35% have had a mystical experience which shares the same features as the NDE: Intense realness, feelings of unity, joy, and peace, and transcendence of time and space.

“By their fruits you shall know them”

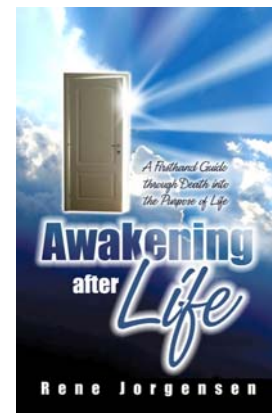

The NDE is a powerful spiritual catalyst and most NDErs report significant or radical life-changes. As an authentic response to the Light, these huge transformations include increased feelings of love, compassion, tolerance, and the feeling of the sacredness of life.

Quantum physics explains the NDE

The NDE is an “Out-of-Dimension” experience that makes contact with the seven extra dimensions predicted by string theory. The NDE does indeed experience a structure-less, primal state of existence beyond time and space as the fundamental level of the universe and today quantum physics can explain the near-death experience.
